Free CPR training classes scheduled June 5

Walmart and the Pizza Gallery at The Avenue Viera have partnered with Health First to offer life-saving CPR/AED classes for the public from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday, June 5. The classes, offered free of charge, will be conducted at the Training Center of Health First, located in the Rivercrest Center. The address 3470 N. U.S. Highway 1 in Melbourne. Walmart has donated grant money to be put toward the cost of providing the one-hour training sessions. "We are extremely pleased that Walmart has chosen to support Health First's CPR program," said Health First spokesman Elliot Cohen. "Walmart's support of our programs demonstrates the kind of community partnership that benefits everyone. We encourage everyone to take advantage and learn this life-saving skill." As an added incentive to take the class, Pizza Gallery is offering a free personal gourmet pizza to anyone completing the CPR/AED training. A certificate for pizza will be given to those completing the training at the conclusion of each class. Registration is required to attend the program. The number to call is 434-1972.
